

A detailed method on how to integrate your shadow.

POWER & WILL - MACHIAVELLI BOT

JUL 29, 2026

Every time you act out in a regrettable manner, its a result of your shadow manifesting itself involuntarily.

Your central-self that most commonly embodies the YOU that people know you as, fails to control it.

The regret followed by the urge, is a sign of the shadow in control.

Reflect over the course of your past & identify the moments you acted out that led to regret.

Find patterns in the behaviours that acted out involuntarily to identify each one.

Pick one of the shadows you are prone to FREQUENTLY: a repetitive behaviour you regret often.

The frequency of regret from a particular behaviour, measures how much your central-self is consumed by this shadow.

This metric also determines the level of harm your shadow inflicts upon your surrounding.

The more repetitive the regrettable behaviour, the stronger the shadow.

Clearly identify this behaviour, categorise it under the 7 sins, give it a name, an identity & understand its personality.

Write down in a diary, in past experience about this behaviour as if its someone else, explicitly detailing WHY it acted out, & HOW it acted out.

The "WHY & WHAT" gives the shadow identity.

You must give it an identity in order to enslave it.

Write a true story about it based on its past experiences.

This is a necessary process of familiarity with your shadow.

"WHY" the demon acts out is the TRIGGER that brings it to existence.

This could be someone or something you envy, hate or love.

Write down a list of "HOW" it acts out - detailing the behaviour it displays to get what it wants.

Conceptualise the TRIGGER as the portal of hell. Because it is literally when the demon comes to existence.

Now understand that,

1. Voluntary exposure to hell - makes you a predator.
2. Involuntary encounter to hell - makes you a prey.

Example

Leaving the marshmallow on the table - is voluntary exposure to hell.

Removing it off the table, will lead to involuntary encounter at a later point in time.

The former makes you a predator in control of your urge (shadow).

The latter makes you a prey consumed by it.

You must VOLUNTARILY expose yourself to the triggers that bring about your regrettable behaviours.

This is the process of systemic desensitisation.

Then, when you battle with the shadow and begin to influence how it acts out, you begin the process of shadow integration.

Every round of voluntary exposure to your shadow, should ideally lead to better control of it.

If you waited 5 minutes before consuming the marshmallow in the first round, you should wait longer the next round.

Eventually you won't feel the need to act on it.

Shadow integrated.

The marshmallow test was a social science experiment by a Stanford psychologist who linked willpower to future success.

But its concept can be extended in shadow integration as it fundamentally tests the urge of an individual & the ability of the central-self to suppress it.

Shadow integration is a two step process.

1. Open the portal of hell by exposing yourself to the trigger and confronting the emergence of your shadow.
2. Battle against it by slowly taking away its capacity to impose its will upon why it's been summoned & what it wants.

You will know that your shadow has integrated when you open the portal of hell, expose yourself to the trigger, only to realise that the devil has ceased to exist. There's no urge, no desire to fight off.

It's just you, with the devil inside, under resolute voluntary control.

Shadow integration is the process of individuation - where one consciously & gradually integrates the unconscious aspects of themselves that they refused to confront and are enslaved by it - into their central personality to achieve individuation & completion.

You can only use devilish means for angelic outcomes, when you're absolutely certain that the demon you are unleashing, will not turn on you.

That you have familiarised yourself to it, that you have given it an identity, & taken away its power, to use at your own will.

Formatted below with the wording unchanged.

Becoming a high value man, through shadow integration.

If you often find yourself acting out in a way that makes you regret it later, it means you have a limited understanding of what the driving forces are behind your behaviour.

To stop acting out in weak, uncharacteristic manner, you must integrate your shadow.

Conceptualise yourself as having multiple personalities. Because if there's a side to you that regrets your own actions, its possible that you're not entirely in control of who you are.

Its possible that those other personalities are desires that work against you.

In your conceptualisation, you want to give these personalities an identity so you can hone in on their character.

To do this, select the cardinal vices of humans, taught in christianity, to label your other 'selves' - pride, greed, wrath, envy, lust, gluttony & sloth.

Your regrets, or actions that are uncharacteristic of you, are largely driven by these vices. The magnitude of each vice acting out is different in every person. And a persons ability to suppress each one from acting out also varies greatly.

Your aim is to exercise suppression.

The part of you that finds these random acts of behaviour uncharacteristic is the conscious you, the central core of your personality - the 8th identity.

Like a nation, the 8th is the governing body that legislates everything for the nations growth to prevent anarchy. The stronger the 8th, the weaker the 7 personalities, the more integrated & grounded you are, like a proper functioning nation.

The weaker the 8th, the more powerful the 7 personalities.

Your shadow, is effectively these repressed 7 personalities.

Most people repress their shadow - forcefully denying their existence from awareness.

This only makes the 7 personalities come back with a vengeance to undermine the central self.

Shadow integration is the act of consciously SUPPRESSING the desires AT WILL.

Repressing means to deny its existence.

Supressing means to embrace its existence only if it plays by your rules.

Given that the human condition stretches down to hell as well as it reaches up to heaven, we are left with no choice but to emrace our shadow.

You have the opportunity to integrate your shadow, every time it manifests itself.

If you felt greedy, and unjustly took something from someone, & regretted it later, that was your shadow manifesting.

Next time you suppress it, you learn to integrate it.

The more you learn to suppress the uncharacteristic parts of you, the closer you get in integrating your shadow.

This is essentially what integrity MEANS - the latin meaning to 'complete' - the ability to do, but choosing not to - the stable paradox - a man of character.

Only upon shadow integration, where you have fully self-legislated your 7 personalities with the central you (the 8th), can you then yield your dark desires towards benevolent ends.

The manifestation of your shadow will no longer be random, but controlled.

ONLY then, can you harness wrath to destroy evil, envy to become a worthy contestant, greed for growth to provide.

You will select AT WILL, to manifest parts of your shadow when you deem rightfully necessary, & keep the other parts dormant that yield to no noble end.

A stable paradox is the man that can do both good & evil to deliver good FROM evil.

A man cannot do this, unless he has the ability to suppress his dark personalities at will.

Suppression leads to shadow integration - A stable paradox.

Alternatively, an unstable paradox is a man enslaved by his 7 personalities.

He is in constant regret of his actions, constantly promising himself he will 'change', but he continuously succumbs to his 7 desires.

Weak, lacks integrity & central self.

Unworthy.

Then you have religious conventions teaching us to become morally obedient, stripping away our capacity to occupy the paradox.

It has taught us to repress our shadow, so when it manifests, it undermines us.

It has taught us to cowardly seek the divine through subordination.

If we want to win the spiritual war, we need to fight off the spirits within us.

We cannot do this by adhering to religious, traditional means.

We cannot integrate our shadow through moral obedience.

And if we cannot integrate our shadow, we cannot win the spiritual war.

Identify your personalities (shadow). Watch like a hawk when they act out.

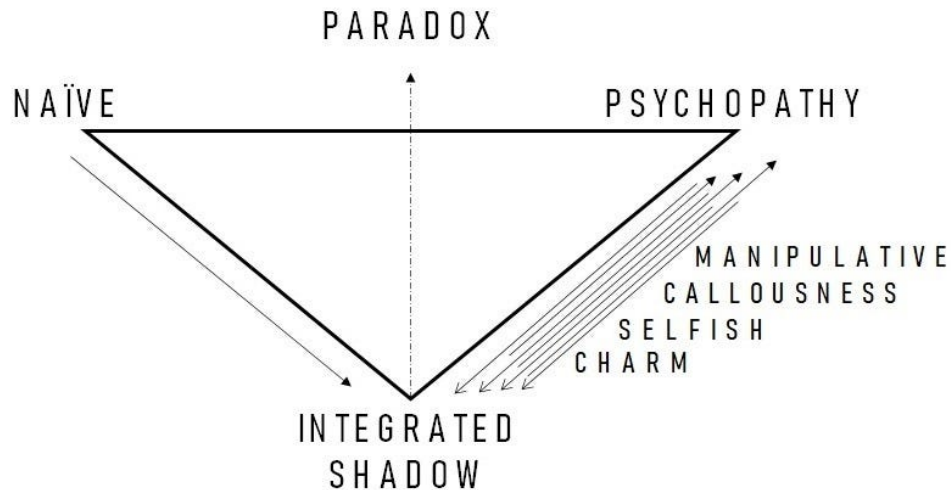

Embrace them into consciousness by suppressing them next time they emerge.

Then yield them to noble ends.

Become a force to contend with.

Self-legislate the 8th or dance with the 7 devils.

Psychopathic traits you should develop to protect yourself & get ahead in life.

Psychopathy is largely hereditary, but some of its traits are on a spectrum.

This means we all, to a degree encompass psychopathy and certain traits can be voluntarily developed.

If your intention is to get ahead in life & rise above others in your line of work, you will be forced to work in a competitive field, not a cooperative one.

Contest requires callous attributes to what the average person possesses.

Competence sometimes is not enough in a competitive field.

There will be resentful, envious people waiting for the right moment to use dirty tactics to tear you down.

You have to equip yourself with traits that can defend & inflict the same amount of damage.

Using psychopathic traits to get ahead comes at the cost of your integrity.

This is a disclaimer that the purpose of developing these traits is to employ it only on those willing to use them against you.

This is shadow integration.

People think psychopaths have no association with emotions. This is simply wrong.

They lack emotions, but they fully employ it as it is their portal to which they can exploit & conquer their victims.

They manifest it themselves anytime at will, for objective selfish purposes.

1. Lack of empathy

The competitive field provides value on the basis of competence, not empathy.

Detachment from emotions is a necessity.

Emotional people fail to make harsh decisions in the best interest of the business, because of the ramifications it has on 'nice people'.

You need to control your desire in having to care for others. You're not in such position until you care for yourself first.

Then you can extend that privilege to those who deserve it & lead them.

Empathy is the enemy of contest, a precursor to success.

2. Manipulation

You are being manipulated when a request is accommodated with emotions.

They will play victim if you refuse, or rejoice if you ask for a favour, only to leverage it against you after.

Psychopaths avoid to rationalise because it exposes their manipulations.

Understand emotions if you want to manipulate.

If you cant manipulate other people, you're a victim of anyone who can.

Learn the empathy triad and exercise it at will to manoeuvre & influence others.

And identify when it's being used against you.

3. Empathy Triad

Cognitive -To get people to do tasks you want to do that pertain risk.

Emotional -To bond with others to reveal weaknesses in order to leverage.

Compassionate -Best used by instigating a problem, sympathising with reaction, & then offering an ideal solution.

Observe those who are easily irritated. They are the easiest to apply the empathy triad on & manipulate.

Never get irritated yourself. Remain objective, calm and goal-orientated.

If you expose your emotions, you are subject to manipulation.

4. Detached

You can never offend a psychopath or get under his skin.

He will never take anything personally and remain focused on his objective.

Treat compliments & insults the same.

The former is to make you complacent.

The latter is to throw you off.

5. Self-Interest

Every negotiation, every action you make should yield maximum self-interest.

Your positional ascendancy will almost always come at the cost of someone else's.

Don't think they wouldn't throw you under if they get the chance themselves.

You come first.

6. Indifferent

Psychopaths never reveal their interest.

They in fact display behaviours that goes against their interest just to mislead others.

This is paramount to negotiation & getting what you want.

Act as if you're outcome independent.

When you show interest, you are taking a position.

When you show conviction to a position, you become entrapped.

The more conviction, the more entrapped you are, the more your position can be leveraged against you.

Hide your true interests when negotiating.

7. Leverage

Use leverage to weaken people's position if they are willing to do the same to you.

Your competence is your strength that can leverage them to a chokehold.

Their weaknesses are opportunities to exploit & leverage to your means.

If you know they act in bad faith, don't confront them.

Be patient & befriend them.

Share false vulnerabilities to create a covenant of trust & loyalty, then leverage their own vulnerability to force them into subordination.

Make them pay.

8. Charm

Charm is the vehicle used to deliver these methods.

- Give compliments when they least expect it
- Tell them what they want to hear
- Fake a vulnerability to bond
- Seek consensus over truth
- Don't get offended, ever
- Pretend to care & listen
- Memorise names

Those who ascend in competitive fields, concern themselves with human capital, value exchange & leverage.

They lack emotions, & yet have the ability to use them to counter-manipulate others to their end.

If you cant do this, you're a victim of anyone who can.

No exceptions.

Become a stable paradox. Equip yourself so you can obliterate those who stand against you in bad faith.

Only look out for yourself.

Only help others when you reach a position that disallows people to leverage your care as a weakness against you.

Because they would.

Men need to integrate their shadow.

Integrating your shadow effectively means to harness the malevolent side of your being, and yielding it to a noble end.

Not everyone has the ability to integrate their shadow. It requires strength in character, & resolute integrity.

To integrate your shadow, you must first understand that:

Morality is the act of doing good, and cannot coexist with self-interest.

Immorality is the act of malevolent creativity.

Amorality is acting in interest, with no regard to good or evil.

A person doing a moral act cannot expect any benefit from it.

But when both parties benefit; it becomes an amoral act.

If the act leads to the recipients harm, then its immoral.

True morality is extremely rare.

The morality set out by religious & traditional customs imposes men to do good for a God-given reward, & supposedly prevent them from deviating off a path that could lead to hell.

It makes men uphold a pseudo morale while rendering them naïve through obedience.

The problem with moral obedience is that it prevents you from visiting hell.

But in life, its often hell that visits you.

Involuntary encounter of hell, makes you a prey.

Voluntary confrontation of hell makes you a predator.

Men must reject morality to escape obedience.

Its foolish to assume that morality always leads to a good outcome.

Giving money with no expectation of a return (a moral act), to a child who's shining shoes, will almost always derail him.

Whereas making him work for it (an amoral act), will make him competent in the future.

Its a common misconception that amorality is evil.

But choices that lead to the best interest of both parties, are the most life-furthering act a man can make.

Amorality is exempt from obedience, and when exercised righteously, it becomes the antidote to immorality.

The first step in integrating your shadow is to reject morality.

To reject morality, you must replace it with amorality.

To righteously act in a amoral way, you must develop integrity.

Integrity is the backbone of guiding amoral actions towards life-furthering values.

Integrity enables a man to exercise self-restraint & abstain from engaging in opportunities that would allow him to get away without consequences.

Combined with amorality, he can become disobedient, look out for his & others interests, & develop self-reliance.

An amoral man of integrity who refuses to be obedient, is a man who can integrate his shadow.

The essence of 'having the unrestricted option to do, but choosing not' is what gives him the power to confront hell, take the heat & not be consumed by it.

The cost of integrating your shadow, means to lose your compass of religious obedience.

A dangerous but necessary transition to win the spiritual war.

Something religion will never teach you.

And that is why we are losing.

The difference between a moral religious man & an amoral man of integrity, is that the former obeys commandments, and that the latter self-legislates his own commandments towards a higher power that can deliver good from evil.

An amoral man of integrity seeks to address his interest while looking out for the interest of others.

He is unchained from obedience & will do what it takes to achieve a noble end.

He is a predator, waiting to hunt malevolence, and obliterate it.

He will harness the sin of wrath, for he knows that when evil takes by force, he can only restore it by force.

He will harness the sin of envy, if it means to transcend his life to a higher standard of living, without being consumed by resentment.

He will harness the sin of greed to seek abundance, but then to provide to those in need, before the allure of lavishness derails him.

He will harness the sin of pride, to walk among those who are pathologically narcissistic, while keeping his humility intact.

He will harness every quality in the dark triad to make the malevolent pay, and bring about a benevolent end for himself & those he cares about.

He knows his shadow already stretches down to hell.

Futile to deny it, he embraces it under voluntary control.

The best men occupy the paradox. They yield satans trident spear to destroy evil.

They voluntary confront hell. They don't need obedience to keep them upright.

They don't need religion. They are gods warriors.

Self-legislate or perish.
